Silly Skin Safari

About the creators: Maya Morcos, Reem Al-Rawi, and Amir-Ali Golrokhian-Sani are three best friends embarking on a journey to empower young minds with the magic of art and storytelling, all in the name of health and wellness. Together, they have started many initiatives in the pursuit of this goal, with ‘Silly Skin Safari’ being the newest edition to the list. In this book, their vision comes to life, weaving together a tapestry of knowledge and imagination.

Kid used to think wearing sunscreen
was shoddy...

...until the elephant used dirt
to protect his body!

pandas have dark patches
to see in the sun...

...they taught Marc
wearing sunglasses
is fun!

Reem knows some colours block more sunrays than others...

'cuz Ms. Chameleon
turns pale to flee
heat in the summers!

Mr. Badger avoids the sun altogether...

...choosing the shade in every weather!

I always care for my skin!

the
hippo
said proudly...

...I moisturize my snout daily,
even when it's cloudy!

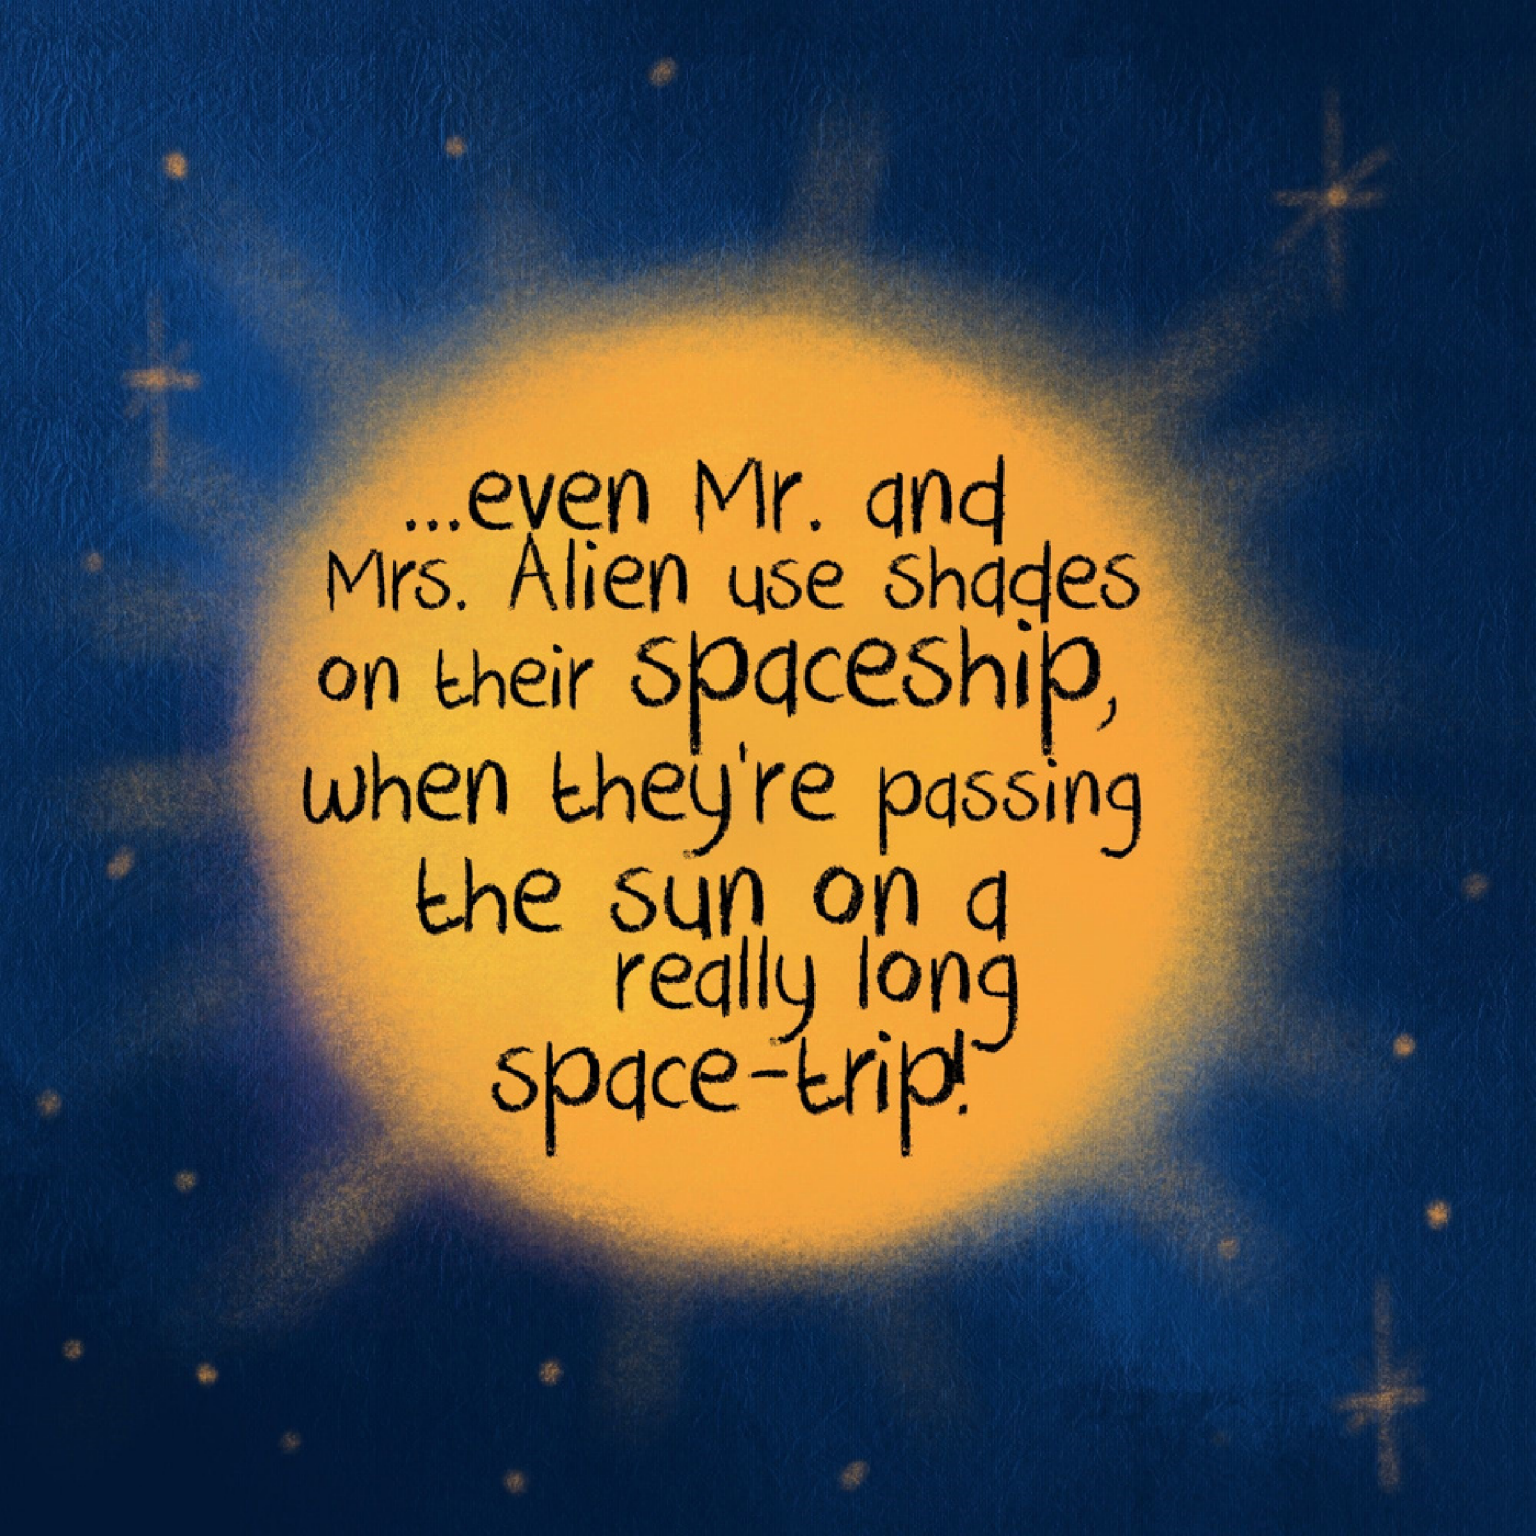

Mrs. Giraffe eats
fruits with her
long stretchy
tongue...

An illustration featuring a brown tree trunk on the left side. A branch extends from the trunk, bearing several green leaves and four round fruits: two are red and two are light green. The background is a solid teal color, representing a sky, with two stylized white clouds. The text is written in a black, hand-drawn font in the lower right quadrant.

...because healthy foods can keep our skin looking young!

A hand-drawn illustration of a bright yellow sun in a dark blue night sky with stars. The sun is a large, glowing yellow circle with a soft, hazy glow around it. The sky is a deep blue with several small, white stars scattered throughout. Some stars are simple dots, while others are drawn with short lines radiating from them, giving them a starburst appearance. The overall style is simple and illustrative, typical of a children's book or a hand-drawn poster.

...even Mr. and Mrs. Alien use shades
on their spaceship,
when they're passing the sun on a really long
space-trip!

so next time you go outdoors don't forget...

...wear your sunscreen,
from sunrise to sunset!

Silly Skin Safari

Join Kia, Marc, Reem, and their whimsical animal friends on a delightful journey through the pages of 'Silly Skin Safari'! In this charmingly illustrated children's book, Kia and her friends learn valuable lessons about sun safety and skin care from the most unexpected sources. From the Elephant's ingenious use of dirt to the Panda's stylish dark eye-patches, each story is a playful reminder of the importance of protecting our skin from the sun's rays. With colourful characters like Ms. Chameleon and Mr. Badger, young readers will discover the joys of self-care and healthy habits.
